INVITATION

Dear Colleagues:

The First Congress of the Asian Pacific Society of Respiratory (APSR) will be held in October 1988 for the advancement of respiration and to promote understanding and friendship among specialists in the region. The topics at the congress will include the structure and function of the respiratory system, respiratory infections, bronchial asthma, pulmonary tuberculosis, chronic obstructive lung diseases, interstitial lung diseases, cardiopulmonary abnormalities, occupational lung diseases and lung cancer. It will also cover fields related to pathophysiology, and clinical medicine in addition to various diagnostic and therapeutic aspects. The Organizing Committee earnestly hopes that many involved in activities related to these fields will accept this invitation to participate in the Congress.

At present there is no world-wide organization devoted only to the subject of respiration, but looking at various geographical regions, the American Thoracic Society and Societas Europaea Pneumologica are both very active in North America and Europe, respectively. Many specialists in our region have talked about the formation of a similar organization for the Asian and Pacific area, and I feel that it is particularly auspicious that the APSR has indeed been formed. We hope that our Organizing Committee will continue to work in close cooperation with already-existing societies in other regions in the world and make a significant contribution to progress in the field of respiration.

It is also my hope that those from abroad who participate in the scientific meeting will be able to obtain some familiarity with cultural and historical aspects of Japan. This would render the meaning of attendance at the Congress of even greater significance and also make it more enjoyable.

I would like to conclude by emphasizing how much we feel the need for participation in the Congress in Tokyo by many colleagues in this field throughout the Asian and Pacific region in order to solidly lay the founding stone of our society.
